

SM Alamo System, LLC

Established in 2018, SM Alamo System is located in Nesbit, Mississippi and is owned by Saul Marquez. The firm specializes in providing construction services including glazing systems, metal panel systems, and waterproofing systems. Marquez has an outstanding management team that plays a vital role within the company. The team is comprised of mostly family that include Daniel Hernandez (chief executive officer), Marcelo Marquez (chief operating officer), Ruendy Marquez (president/senior estimator), and Katie Marquez (payroll clerk).

Marquez's father, Marcelo Marquez was in the construction industry for most of his life and passed down his passion for this field of work to his son. "I grew up around construction and immediately following high school I saw an opportunity to create a family business to not only make money but leave a legacy," said Marquez.

Marquez knows the importance of building and maintaining relationships. His firm has worked with prime contractors such as Turner Construction, Tippmann Construction, SGH Concepts, and F. L. Crane. Some of the firm's completed projects include a cancer center for Baptist Hospital in Southaven, MS along with a metal wall panel for a lab in Biloxi, MS. Currently the firm is providing its services for several projects in the Memphis area that entails a sportsplex, parking garage, Glycol facility at the Memphis Airport, and a warehouse in Wyoming. SM Alamo System also anticipates projects with Baptist Memorial Hospital (Memphis) and a Porsche dealership in Baton Rouge.

SM Alamo System is unique because it is comprised of young and seasoned individuals who make for a balance when it comes to being technology driven yet experienced. "Although I am young, I can always learn from my dad and other people who know more than me in certain areas of the business," explained Marquez.

Marquez leaves a word of advice to fellow DBEs and small businesses alike. "The best guidance I can provide as a business owner is take care of your employees because without them you can't get anything done," said Marquez.

A MISSISSIPPI SUCCESS STORY

Amerimac Chemical

Amerimac Chemical is located in Jackson, Mississippi and is owned and operated by Roland Powell. The firm is a full-service specialty chemical company that focuses on wastewater, bioremediation, erosion control and water treatment. The firm also offers chemical and oil spill cleanup, odor control, and a list of specialty chemicals to service various industries. Also, it is the only minority-owned oil, lube, and hazmat chemical company in the southern states. Powell works alongside an efficient and knowledgeable team. He recently hired Ashley Walker as a new project manager as well as another marketing manager.

Currently, Amerimac Chemical is providing chemicals to the City of Jackson for the O.B. Curtis Water Plant which is the firm's largest contracts to date. "Providing wastewater services is important to me because clean water is vital to everyone," said Powell. Other projects include two large erosion control jobs for Nucor Steel (Flowood, MS) and Lackey Memorial Hospital (Forest, MS). In reference to future projects, Amerimac Chemical anticipates supplying gas and pipelines to Atmos Energy and Entergy.

In efforts to grow capacity and continuously forge new relationships, Powell is a participant of a mentor protégé program. Amerimac is partnered with Southern Company. Through their partnership, Amerimac has provided chemicals to Mississippi Power (an investor-owned electric utility and a wholly owned subsidiary of Atlanta-based Southern Company).

Powell also highlighted a 50 percent growth rate over the past year which can be attributed to networking, hard work ethic, and quality products. "As my company expands it allows me to use my platform to invest in the youth; teaching them the construction trade," explained Powell.

As a seasoned and successful small business owner, Powell provided his top three business tools that help him sustain his company. "It's important to have a good a marketing strategy, stay connected by networking and last but not least always follow-up with customers," said Powell.

For more information about this firm, you can contact Roland Powell at 601-918-8321 or rpowell40@aol.com.

OSHA Safety Tip of the Month!

What Causes Worker Fatigue?

Trench hazards are well-known, yet far too many workers continue to be injured or What Causes Worker Fatigue?

Several factors including too little, poor quality or interrupted sleep over a period of time can cause fatigue. Fatigue is the body's signal that a rest period is needed. Long work hours and extended and irregular shifts may be stressful physically, mentally and emotionally. The body operates on a circadian rhythm sleep/wake cycle. It is naturally programmed for sleeping during night hours. Demanding work schedules may disrupt the body's natural cycle, leading to increased fatigue, stress, and lack of concentration.

What are the Effects of Demanding Work Schedules?

Long work hours and extended and irregular shifts may lead to fatigue and to physical and mental stress. Working extended shifts may also involve prolonged exposure to potential health hazards such as noise, chemicals, and others. These exposures could exceed established permissible exposure limits (PELs) or violate other health standards. Employers must implement measures to monitor and limit worker exposures to health and physical hazards in the workplace as required by the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

What Worker Population Does This Affect?

Irregular and extended shifts are common among healthcare providers, transportation workers, first responders, firefighters, police officers, military personnel, construction workers, oil field workers, service and hospitality workers and many others.

What Can Employers Do?

Employers can reduce the risk of worker fatigue in the workplace by:

- Examining staffing issues such as workload, work hours, understaffing and worker absences, scheduled and unscheduled, which can contribute to worker fatigue.
- Arranging schedules to allow frequent opportunities for rest breaks and nighttime sleep.
- Making adjustments to the work environment such as lighting, temperature and physical surroundings to increase alertness. Consider implementing a Fatigue Risk Management Plan under which, like other risk factors, fatigue can be managed.
